All-Night Search for Murderer Reveals Him at Dawn Dead on Beach.

Special to The Evening World.)
HARBOR, April 2.—Harry a, a former resident of this village, had been parted from his wife. de, since January, reached a despersolution of marital difficulties late night by slaying his wife in the of her parents and taking his own soon after the first tragedy.

yons, grown to manhood in the town Rrown by every one, married on to village girls two years ago. He a comfortable income as a maalst and happiness seemed to have red into the little cottage where they blished their home. Three months Nellie Lyons left the new home and ed to her parents' house, declarthat sudden dissipation on her husnd's part had made life with him in-iorable. After pleading with her un-adling the return to him. Lyons left we last failury and went to New-

Within the hear few days old friends Lyons once more on the streets of ar Harbor. He said that he could remain away from his wife, whom loved passionately, and that he had rned to make one more effort to back her esteem and affection. hether he was able to secure an in-view with her before the fatal affair at sight is not known.

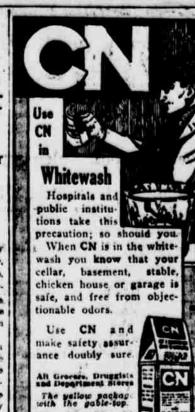

Egons appeared at the door of the come of lars. Lyons late last night and seed it, see his wife. She came to the coer. Whatout a word Lyons pulled a svelver from his pocket and fired at ar. The bullet entered her throat and he felt with a scream. Lyons shot at appin as she lay at his feet and a pine and ran out into the dark-when a physician arrived he ound the wife dead, both bullets have ound the wite der throat and mouth All night long a search was made by fields, but no trace of the mur-r was found. Near dawn to-day dy was found lying just beyond he rim of the tide on the beach east of the village. There was a builet hole through his head. Lyons had killed himself several hours before his body md, an examining physician
